HORRID HENRY AND THE ABOMINABLE SNOWMAN

'Oh, the competition. I know all about that,' lied Horrid Henry. 'Hey, great snowman,' he added, strolling casually over to Margaret's snowman and pretending to admire her work.

Now, what should he do? Torture? Margaret's ponytail was always a tempting target. And snow down her jumper would make her talk.

What about blackmail? He could spread some great rumours about Margaret at school. Or . . .

"Tell me about the competition or the ice guy gets it, said Horrid Henry suddenly, leaping over to the snowman and putting his hands round its neck.

'You wouldn't dare,' gasped Moody Margaret.

Henry's mittened hands got ready to

'Bye bye, head,' hissed Horrid Henry.
'Nice knowing you.'

Margaret's snowman wobbled.

'Stop!' screamed Margaret. I'll tell you.
It doesn't matter 'cause you'll never ever win.'

'Keep talking,' said Horrid Henry warily, watching out in case Susan tried to ambush him from behind.

'Frosty Freeze are having a best snowman competition,' said Moody Margaret, glaring. 'The winner gets a year's free supply of ice cream. The judges will decide tomorrow morning.
